Dear Collectors

Welcome to the first Stamp Bulletin of 2009. I hope you have enjoyed (or are still enjoying) this special time of the year with your family and friends. I don't know about you, but for me this time of year provides the opportunity to pause and reflect on life in Australia. Looking back over previous stamp issues reminds me of just how lucky we are as a country.

Before outlining some of the special items contained in this Bulletin, I'd like to thank all those who participated in our 2008 Stamp Poll (People's Choice) and congratulate the lucky winner of our grand prize. I'm sure Mr RJ Williams from NSW will enjoy the (2d. and 3d.) 1931 Kingsford Smith unhinged blocks of four stamps. We really do rely on the feedback obtained from the poll to ensure that we continue to meet your needs. Next month we will provide a detailed summary of what you had to say, while on page 17 of this edition you will find the voting outcomes of the favourite 2008 Australian stamp issue.

Speaking of Australia's favourites, one of the last stamp issues for 2008 was the Favourite Australian Films which included five films voted for by the Australian public as their favourites. They were Gallipoli, Lantana, Muriel's Wedding, The Castle and The Adventures of Priscilla, Queen of the Desert. What we couldn't tell you before now is which one was the favourite (as it was only announced at the 2008 AFI awards on 6 December). Australia's Favourite Film, The Castle, is a classic movie about an Aussie family trying to get a fair go. As we mentioned in the last Bulletin Australia Post produced a special presentation pack for the awards, which includes an embellished sheetlet (see page 10 for details).

The first stamp issue for 2009 is Christmas Island Lunar New Year: Year of the Ox by designer Dani Poon, which celebrates the second year of the Chinese Zodiac 12-year cycle. The issue also includes the first postal and numismatic cover for 2009. Each cover is individually numbered and includes a seal of authenticity, as do all official Australia Post postal and numismatic covers.

January marks the centenary of the first successful expedition to the South Magnetic Pole with the stamp issue, AAT: South Magnetic Pole 1909–2009. The Royal Society of Victoria is arranging a special flight over the South Pole to commemorate the anniversary and to carry commemorative covers for collectors. Refer to page 10 for details but you will need to be quick ... the flight is scheduled for 17 January.

February highlights some of the Australian inventions that have gone toward identifying our unique Australian culture. What could be more Australian than winding up the hoist, mowing the lawn with the Victa or slapping on some zinc cream. I believe this issue will be extremely popular, not only with collectors but among the many general postage users.

Until next time,

Noel Leahy, Group Manager, Philatelic

CI LNY: YEAR OF THE OX

8 JANUARY 2009

55c.....Illustrative Ox
$1.65 ...Chinese symbol for Ox

1594098 zodiac sheetlet

Each year Australia Post issues a stamp to celebrate lunar new year, which is the most important of the traditional Chinese festivals. It is celebrated by Chinese people throughout the world. The Chinese zodiac is made up of a 12-year cycle and Chinese animal signs are used for dating the years. The recurring animal cycle is Rat, Ox, Tiger, Rabbit, Dragon, Snake, Horse, Goat (or Sheep), Monkey, Rooster, Dog and Pig. The next lunar new year is the Year of the Ox, which begins on 26 January 2009.

The Ox symbolises loyalty and tenderness and is highly respected in traditional Chinese society signifying prosperity through fortitude and hard work. The minisheet of the issue depicts Laozi, a prominent thinker in ancient China. A native of Chu, a southern state in the Zhou dynasty, he served as a keeper of archival records at the court.

1594142 minisheet

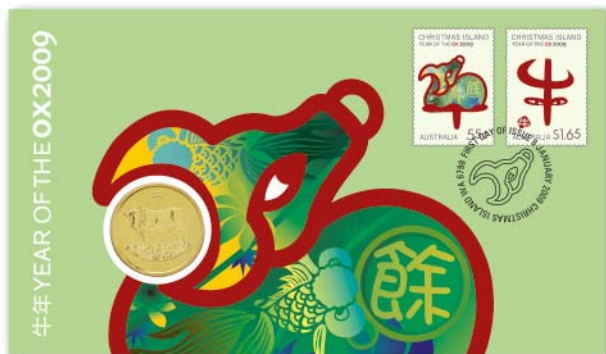

1594212 postcard

Confucius (551–479 B.C. or 2,500 years ago) was a contemporary. Witnessing the decline of Zhou, he departed for the wilderness on his faithful ox. Upon reaching the border he was asked to put his teachings into writing. The result was a book titled Daode jing, which today is one of the most translated works in world literature. The influence of Laozi on Chinese culture is reflected in philosophic thought, literature, calligraphy, painting, music and other cultural traditions.

The stamps feature the calligraphic symbol for the Ox and its pictorial derivation. People born in Ox years include Princess Diana, Charlie Chaplin and Napoleon. Ox years over the last century were 1901, 1913, 1925, 1937, 1949, 1961, 1973, 1985 and 1997. The stamp pack doubles as a greeting card and can be sent to family and friends within Australia and overseas using the matching PPE and IPPE.

The stamp pack is designed for use as a greeting card using the matching postage paid envelopes.

AAT: SOUTH MAGNETIC POLE 1909 – 2009

8 JANUARY 2009

55c..... Unloading the Nimrod
55c..... Depositing provisions
$1.10 ... Northern Party camp
$1.10 ... Claiming the Pole

1608142 minisheet

January 2009 marks the centenary of the first expedition to the South Magnetic Pole, and this issue commemorates that milestone in polar science and exploration. The event was recognised with an Australian stamp issue in 1984, on its 75th anniversary, and with a single stamp in the 2001 issue, Australians in the Antarctic.

Two Australian geologists, TW Edgeworth David and Douglas Mawson, journeyed to the frozen continent of the south with the third British Antarctic Expedition, under the charge of Ernest Shackleton. Along with Scotsman Alistair Mackay, the men were also part of the expedition's three-man Northern Party, which sought to reach the South Magnetic Pole and to claim it for Britain.

With two heavily laden sledges, the Northern Party left Cape Royds on 5 October 1908. The men endured the extreme polar conditions for more than 100 days before raising the Union Jack over the "approximate mean position of the pole" at 3.30pm on 16 January 1909. The pole moves rapidly each day, while at the same time moving north-west by about five kilometres per year, making it notoriously difficult to measure. Following its movement away from land, the pole's most accurate position to date was achieved in 2000 from onboard the Sir Hubert Wilkins.

This stamp issue was designed by Melbourne-based studio Disegno. Historical images from the expedition tell the narrative of the journey, in combination with the typography, which forms a graphic element of the story. The bold white text represents the vast Antarctic landscape and its staged incline across the designs symbolises the increasing difficulty of a journey and the endurance required of the men. The sparse visual approach to the design also conveys the idea of the men at the mercy of the elements.

55c Unloading the Nimrod

On 3 February 1908 the Nimrod was moored on bay ice at Cape Royds, where the British Antarctic Expedition established its winter quarters. The motor car was the first item to be unloaded from the ship, followed by the Manchurian ponies, which were used in Shackleton's attempt to locate the geographical South Pole.

55c Depositing provisions

This expedition was the first to transport a motor car to Antarctica. The car was an Arroll-Johnston 12–15 HP, fitted with a specially designed air-cooled, four-cylinder engine. It was used to deliver provisions for exploration journeys. Only two depots were dropped for the Northern Party before the car returned to base, due to the unforgiving terrain and mechanical difficulties.

$1.10 Northern Party camp

On a journey lasting more than three months, the men hauled sledges through sastrugi and crevasse-riven terrain. This photograph shows the men at camp before making their final dash to the locality of the South Magnetic Pole.

$1.10 Claiming the South Magnetic Pole

This design features the signature image of Edgeworth David (right), Douglas Mawson (centre) and Alistair Mackay (left) on having reached the location of the South Magnetic Pole. The blurred white line at Mawson's hand is the shutter-release cable, which he triggered as David declared: "I hereby take possession of this area now containing the Magnetic Pole for the British Empire."

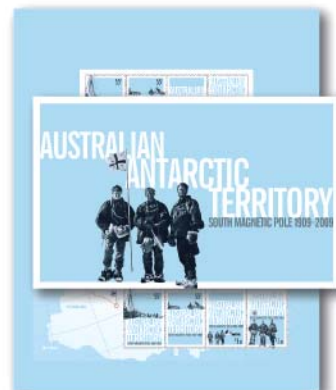

The photographs used on the stamps are reproduced in full in the maxicard set, visually documenting this milestone in our historical record. The stamp release also includes a miniature sheet, which shows the Northern Party's route to the South Magnetic Pole.

55c.....Esky/Wine cask
55c.....Hills hoist
55c.....Speedos/Zinc cream
55c.....Ute/B&D Roll-A-Door
55c.....Victa rotary lawnmower

1597002 first day cover (gummed)

1597142 minisheet

1597182 self-adhesive booklet (10 x 55c)

Australia claims many inventions, the outstanding success of which has ensured their place in collective memory – for example, the sound of lawnmowers and games around the Hills hoist have defined many an Australian childhood. Esky and Speedo, although brand names, have entered the dictionary and popular songs as ordinary words, a reliable marker of widespread acceptance. Several of these inventions were part of a post-war development boom that centred on suburban housing, and the backyard was the amphitheatre in which they took centre stage.

Esky

An Esky is an insulated box that can keep food chilled for many hours. Although a brand name, it is often used as a colloquial term in Australia for any portable cooler. It was invented in 1952 by the Australian company Malley's. The original Malley's Esky had a steel outer layer.

Wine cask

Before the early 1960s, bulk wine was sold in flagons. Once they were opened the exposed wine deteriorated rapidly. Wine casks allowed people to buy large quantities that would keep for a longer period. The first company to market a wine cask was Angove's from Renmark, South Australia, in 1965.

Hills hoist

The modern rotary clothes hoist was first patented in 1926 by Melbourne blacksmith Gilbert Toyne. Though some rotary hoists existed before this date they were expensive and impractical due to their fixed height.

Speedos

The Speedo swimsuit was developed in Australia by a Scot named Alexander MacRae (1888–1938). His company MacRae Hosiery Manufacturers produced a racer-back style suit in response to a need for swimmers to reduce “drag”. The company began marketing the suit in 1928.

Zinc cream

In 1940, Faulding Pharmaceuticals invented zinc cream – the ultimate protection against sunburn. The cream, made from zinc oxide, physically stopped ultra violet rays from reaching skin cells.

B&D Roll-A-Door

One of the most distinctive features of suburban streets, the B&D Roll-A-Door was the first all-steel door that could be rolled closed or open without cracking. Arthur Byrne and Paul Davidson and their company accountant moved their board meeting to Hyde Park, Sydney, to escape the heat and to discuss what to do with left over scrap metal leading to the development of the first commercial door.

The ute

In 1932, a farmer’s wife from rural Victoria wrote to Ford Australia’s Geelong plant asking them to build a vehicle that could be driven to church on Sunday and carry pigs to market on Monday. Twenty-two year old Lewis Bandt, the plant’s chief body engineer and designer, responded with a design.

Victa rotary lawnmower

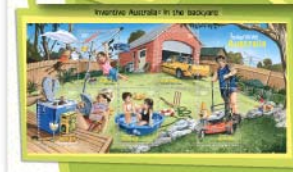

The idea was inspired by Lawrence Hall in 1948. Mervyn Victor Richardson saw a demonstration of Hall’s lawn mowing machine and made a similar one. Richardson realised the potential of the innovation and in 1952 designed a simple machine and named his creation the “Victa”.

TALKING STAMPS

WITH BRADLEY FROHNERT

On 20 October 2008 the magnificent Qantas A380 Airbus took to the skies with exclusive Australia Post cargo – its First Flight covers.

This was the first Australian commercial passenger A380 international flight, flying from Melbourne to Los Angeles. Philatelic collectors had the opportunity to obtain a hand-addressed Aviation stamp issue cover carried on this very first flight. The customer response was overwhelming, with our allocated cargo space quickly filled.

The covers were transported to the Qantas freight terminal by a Philatelic representative, and after numerous security checks were on their way. Qantas staff in Los Angeles kept a watchful eye on the special mail bag, and on its return to Melbourne Qantas contacted Australia Post shortly after the A380 airliner touched down. For the lucky recipients of the First Flight covers the rest is history!

The First Flight covers feature two A380 international stamps and imagery of the airliner. In addition, the covers feature a full-colour, digitally printed postmark – an Australian first – and an exclusive official AIRMAIL sticker and cache recording mail items carried on this first flight, including origin, flight date and destination.

Qantas named its A380 airliner after Australia's first female pilot, Nancy Bird-Walton. In 1933 Mrs Bird-Walton began flying lessons at Mascot at just 17 years of age and was taught by famous pioneer aviator Charles Kingsford Smith. She became the first woman pilot in the Commonwealth to achieve commercial certification to carry passengers. Mrs Bird-Walton was delighted with the naming of the aircraft in her honour.

Since 1914, when the first Australian airmail flight occurred, there has been a tradition of sending mail on inaugural flights. On that flight, French pilot

Maurice Guillaux took off from the Melbourne Showgrounds, at 9.12am on 16 July, with about 2,000 postcards and a number of letters. Weather conditions were not ideal; the flight was made mid-winter over the most mountainous portion of the continent, terrain unfamiliar to Guillaux. The sense of wonder and admiration his journey created is conveyed in the newspapers of the time, and it is incredible to think how far technology has advanced since those pioneering days.

Today the A380 is the largest and most technologically advanced aircraft ever built, and reduces take off noise by half. For the aviation enthusiasts, the craft's length is 72.57m, height 24.1m, fuselage diameter 7.14m and wing span 79.8m. It has four Rolls-Royce Trent 900 engines, a fan diameter of 3m, maximum ramp weight of 571 tonnes, maximum fuel capacity of 310,400 litres and a seat count of 450, including 14 first-class suites and 72 business-class Skybed seats.

The first flight of the new A380 to Los Angeles takes off from Melbourne's Tullamarine Airport

Stamps of Australia 2005–2008 (November 2008 to June 2009)

Australia is a multicultural and comparatively young nation that has a strong culture and identity. It is distant from major world centres and, consequently perhaps, less influenced by world trends. The Australian stamps and philatelic products in this exhibit reflect this in both subject matter and innovative approaches to the products and their marketing. They showcase Australia's unique culture, landscape, flora and fauna.

The stamps and products on display are fresh and unique, and include domestic and international stamps, instant stamps (on sale within a day or so of major events), stamps of living Australian legends, personalised stamps and others. The exhibit includes Australian Antarctic Territory, Christmas Island and Cocos (Keeling) Islands stamps.

Here Comes the Postie—200 Years of Postal Services in Australia

This exhibition will not be shown in the Post Master Gallery as originally advised. It will now form part of an exhibit at the Melbourne Stamp Show from 23 to 26 July 2009 at the National Tennis Centre. The exhibit will include gems from the National Philatelic Collection and the Chapman Collection.
