Dear Collectors

For those of you who attended the World Stamp Expo in Melbourne it was an opportunity to witness philately in Australia at its finest. The atmosphere throughout the six days was buzzing with excitement and genuine appreciation of the exhibits. Initial indications are that the World Stamp Expo in Melbourne was a huge success!

Michael Zsolt
Manager, Philatelic Australia Post

For most it was an opportunity to witness philately in A enuine appreciation of the exhibits.

It was an amazing experience and I congratulate all those who participated in bringing it together. The event has been regarded as one of the best ever held and the future of philately looks to be a bright one if we refer to the amount of interest that was generated.

This is something that the Australian philatelic fraternity can all be proud of, and for the Australia Post Philatelic Team, it was an opportunity to meet colleagues and collectors from around the world. I extend warm thanks to all those who travelled long distances to join us in Melbourne.

One of the highlights was the range of products available through the Australia Post stand. The stand was kept busy right through to closing on the final day with people taking the time to stop by the Black Caviar special exhibit before picking up commemorative products.

For the very first time Australia Post used the Personalised Stamps™ technology to give visitors to the show the opportunity to appear on their own sheet of stamps – a huge success on Mother's Day.

The new look Australian Stamp Bulletin released in time for the expo was also an area of comment. In its 60th year I am pleased to be able to continue to offer subscribers a quality publication that supports the hobby in Australia through its announcement of philatelic products released by Australia Post.

“The greatest sprinter and the greatest female equine athlete world racing has seen in the modern era.”

Greg Carpenter, Racing Victoria
Executive General Manager - Racing

The six-year-old mare, Black Caviar, leaves an extraordinary legacy of 25 wins from 25 starts, including 15 Australian Group 1 victories. Her consecutive wins constitute a world record for horses of the modern age competing at the elite level.

She first showed promise as a two and three-year-old with five wins from five starts. As a four-year-old her career blossomed when she faced her first Group 1 challenge in what was wonderfully described as “an astonishing demolition job”. On 28 April 2012, Black Caviar established a new Australian record of 20 consecutive wins when she took out the Robert Sangster Stakes in Adelaide.

In June 2012, Black Caviar journeyed overseas to compete in the Diamond Jubilee Stakes at Royal Ascot. Australians watching the race held their breath when, after taking the lead with some 200 metres to go, jockey Luke Nolen eased her back enabling second running horse Moonlight Cloud to momentarily draw level. In the final strides before the line Black Caviar surged forward to win by a head and examination would reveal that she had incurred injuries during the race. Black Caviar returned to the track in 2013 with wins in the Lightning Stakes, William Reid Stakes and the T.J. Smith Stakes. Her connections announced her retirement from racing on 17 April 2013.

EXPO
10-15 MAY 2013

Australia Post stand

So keen were collectors to purchase products from the Australia Post stand that, at the onset of the expo, the queue was running to the back wall of the Royal Exhibition Building. Australia Post volunteers manning the stand had never seen anything like it. Stand out products included the Kangaroo and Map commemorative range, the personalised stamp products and the daily PNCs.

Court of Honour

This section of the expo was popular with many wanting to see Australia's first banknote up close and a full sheet of £2 Kangaroo and Map stamps from Australia Post's National Philatelic Collection. Of equal popularity was the rare large multiple of 1928 Kookaburra Miniature Sheet from the Royal Philatelic Collection.

Stand holders

A cross section of postal administrations, Australian mints, dealers and traders made up the majority of the stand holders. Many dealers offered popular collection appraisals – a great opportunity for novice collectors given the quality of expert advice available.

Australia 2013 World Stamp Expo Grand Prix Results

Australia is a country of vast and changing landscapes and great extremes. From the moist tropical north to the dry Central Australian deserts and the cool alpine regions of the south, Australia offers its road-trippers a wealth of terrain, destinations and experiences.

This second issue in the Road Trip Australia stamp series puts rural ports of call into the rear-view mirror, turning the wheel towards some of Australia's bustling and vibrant urban hubs. Illustrator Gavin Ryan offers colourful, offbeat cameos of Sydney, Melbourne, the Gold Coast, Adelaide and Canberra.

Please note that images of deceased Indigenous people are contained within this collection.

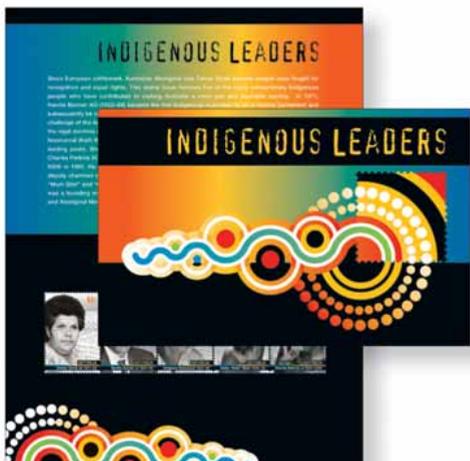

This stamp issue features Indigenous Australians whose efforts brought about change, gender equality and recognition.

Neville Bonner AO (1922–99) became the first Aboriginal person to sit in the Australian Commonwealth parliament. Eddie “Koiki” Mabo (1936–92) challenged the Australian government and won over the rightful ownership of the land he grew up on.

Odgeroo Noonuccal (1920–93), also known as Kath Walker, was a poet and advocated for citizenship rights for Indigenous people. Charles Perkins AO (1936–2000), Aboriginal leader and spokesperson, was also Secretary of the Department of Aboriginal Affairs. Shirley Smith AM (Mum Shiril) (1921–98) was born Colleen Shirley Perry and was well known in Sydney for her assistance to Indigenous families and prisoners.

This stamp issue features key events across the 20th century, which became headline news in Australian papers. Sydney's Dancing Man would go on to symbolise the joy that comes with an end to war, and in 1969, astronauts Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin held television viewers captive when they became the first men to set foot on the moon.

Darwin was devastated on Christmas morning in 1974 when it was hit by Cyclone Tracy. The stories of heroism and survival were felt around the country. And until 1983 the New York Yacht Club had successfully defended the America's Cup. John Bertrand and the crew of Australia II changed that by defeating Liberty in the seventh and final race of the series.

From around 1909 mail and other essential items were delivered to the Cocos (Keeling) Islands within barrels lowered or dropped from passing P&O and Orient Line ships. The approaching liner would notify the cable station on Direction Island and staff members would collect the barrel from their jukongs. At the same time, outgoing mail was sealed in a tin can and attached to a line trailing from the ship making the drop. Some mail dispatched to and from the islands in this way carried a range of postal markings and cachets such as “Tin Can Mail” or “Orion Barrel” (in reference to the RMS Orion). A regular air service, first introduced in 1952, put an end to barrel and tin can mail in 1954.

Stamp Bulletin

diamond jubilee

The Australian Stamp Bulletin is 60 years old. In August 1953, an eight-page, bimonthly Philatelic Bulletin made its first appearance, with an initial print run of just 800. The Postmaster-General's Department announced the new publication would provide information about new stamp issues and "other news of philatelic interest concerning current and obsolete Commonwealth stamps and postal stationery."

Sixty years on, the Australian Stamp Bulletin is somewhat different, but it aims to keep the stamp world fully informed about new Australian stamps and philatelic products. The current distribution of 150,000 ensures this objective is met.

The Bulletin's launch in 1953 was part of a new program implemented by the Postmaster-General's Department. It included setting up the Philatelic Bureau to conduct mail order sales (the Bureau is also 60 years old in 2013), and operating designated counters in major post offices for selling to collectors. Also, the National Philatelic Collection came into being, ensuring that all items of philatelic significance associated with the development of new stamps were retained.

The work was supervised by Phil Collas (1907–1989), appointed the first philatelic manager in 1951. A longtime editor of the Australian Stamp Monthly (a commercial publication), Collas's skills served him well as editor of the Philatelic Bulletin. He also managed stamp design and production, so he was well placed to write authoritatively about these matters.

Until 1960, Collas was the sole contributor to the Bulletin, but that year Kevin McKay (1921–2000) began a 16-year association with the Bulletin. In 1969, McKay became philatelic manager following the retirement of Collas.

During the first 17 years, the Philatelic Bulletin was a slim publication featuring black-and-white illustrations, and page layouts generated from typewritten sheets pasted into position. Its total circulation was less than 10,000. To boost appeal, the Bulletin became a glossy, colour magazine in April 1970. Within a few years, the Bulletin's circulation grew exponentially to 250,000. In 1978, the magazine acquired a new title, the Australian Stamp Bulletin. The Bulletin changed to the existing A5 format in April 1985 – a more economical course for a publication with a large print run.

Over its 60-year existence, the Bulletin has rarely featured signed articles. It is not a journal of contributors' opinions, but rather a source of official information. However, it is appropriate to acknowledge the Bulletin editors of the past four decades – Kitty Barclay, Anil Sachdev, Leonie Thiele, Chris Brown, John Tinney, Sandy Watson, Amanda Finnis, Vida Mierendorff, Carol Daniels and Kerry Tillison (current editor).

Probably the most famous carnivorous plants are featured in the novel, The Day of the Triffids, by John Wyndham – tall intelligent plants which killed their victims with a deadly whip-like sting. Fortunately, real-life carnivorous plants confine their aggression to capturing and eating animals and insects.

There are more than 670 species of carnivorous plants found across the world except in Antarctica. In Australia there are more than 200 species of which more than half are endemic, or native to, Australia. These are represented by six genera, Aldrovanda, Byblis, Cephalotus, Drosera, Nepenthes, and Utricularia.

Each of the plants is shown with a creature it is most likely to eat.

Drosera lowriei occurs on granite outcrops in south western Australia and was named after Allen Lowrie a West Australian botanist.

Drosera rupicola is a tuberous species found exclusively in the southern wheat belt and goldfields areas of Western Australia.

Nepenthes rowanae was named after the famous Australian botanical artist Ellis Rowan.

Cephalotus follicularis is commonly known as the Albany or Western Australian Pitcher Plant and is found only in the south-west of Australia.

Australia is home to stunning coral reefs including the Great Barrier Reef in Queensland and Ningaloo Reef in Western Australia.

The stamps in this issue show aerial and underwater images of the two reefs.

Ningaloo Reef is off the coast of the Cape Range peninsula. This park and heritage-listed region is home to the largest fringing coral reef in Australia. Whale sharks are regular visitors arriving for the coral-spawning season.

The Great Barrier Reef runs for more than 2,000 kilometres and is the world's largest coral reef system. It has almost 200 varieties of hard coral and more than 100 types of soft coral. Species found on the reef include minke whales, barracuda and whitetip reef sharks.
