Dear Collectors

Welcome to the May edition of the Stamp Bulletin, presenting a variety of stamp issues, including one that highlights Australia's natural beauty and diversity through four islands. Another draws attention to an atmospheric wonder of the chilly south.

The Colours of the Australian Antarctic Territory stamp issue contradicts any perception that the vast Antarctic continent, with its extensive ice and snow, is essentially white. The stamps show the brilliant hues and effects that occur when light is reflected in ice crystals suspended in the air.

A stamp issue set for release in May will give cat owners something to really purr about. With Australia having a high rate of cat ownership, and with a greater awareness of the importance of pets for many people, we are seeing cat-friendly restaurants, hotels and holiday resorts for feline fanciers.

The subject of another issue is one that collectors will be right at home with, as we look at some of the treasures found in Australian museum collections. Exploring the extensive range of items exhibited through our museums is a wonderful pastime for both locals and the many tourists that visit our shores each year. Collections tell Australia's many stories in a very visual way.

Australia's record of innovation and research excellence is recognised through a stamp issue which celebrates the centenary of the Walter and Eliza Hall Institute of Medical Research. Scientific leaders associated with the institute include Nobel laureate Sir Macfarlane Burnet, Sir Gustav Nossal and Professor Donald Metcalf. The medical research provided through this world-renowned facility has enabled many people around the world to lead normal and healthy lives.

The Cats stamp issue introduces five cute and well-cared-for cats of varying coat lengths, colourings and personalities: Charo, Bubu, Sweetie, Cato and Briony. They span the four categories of cats used by many national and state cat associations in Australia.

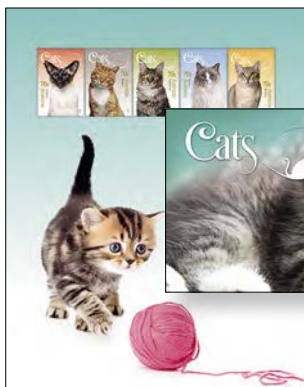

The first social cat club in Australia was founded in Victoria, in 1919. The Governing Council of the Cat Fancy was the first national cat association, also set up in Victoria in 1928. It was only the third such group in existence globally at the time, reflecting a significant national interest in cats.

Even today, cats are the second-most popular pet in Australia. By far the most common type of pet cat is the domestic shorthair, like our handsome ginger moggie, Bubu.

Museums are treasure houses. They collect, preserve and exhibit important objects and stories, and generate research that builds knowledge and enables innovation. Museum collections vary widely and the objects featured in this stamp issue reflect on cultural contexts and historical moments. They also illuminate specific stories, themes and issues.

The anchor of the HMB Endeavour (National Museum of Australia) represents British maritime exploration and possession of Australia's east coast; the Welcome Stranger nugget replica (Sovereign Hill's Gold Museum) signals the Australian gold rushes era; the automatic totaliser model (Museum of Applied Arts and Sciences) represents design and technological innovation; and Turtle (Australian Museum) recognises Indigenous culture and its response to the problem of discarded fishing nets, which endanger marine fauna. The artist, Ellarose Savage, is represented by Erub Erwer Meta art centre.

The block of four stamps in this issue adds further interest to the designed gutter.

Only two of the world's continents lie entirely within the Southern Hemisphere: Australia and Antarctica. Australia lies quite close to the equator, while Antarctica is situated about the South Geographic Pole.

Antarctica is almost entirely covered by an ice sheet. In extreme weather snow blizzards can cause whiteout, an optical phenomenon in which uniform light conditions effectively make it impossible to distinguish shadows, landmarks or the horizon. This can occur when the snow cover is unbroken and the sky is overcast. Whiteout is a serious hazard as it causes a loss of perspective and direction.

However, some beautiful effects can be observed. In the freezing dry atmosphere of the Australian Antarctic Territory frozen water vapour remains in the air as suspended ice crystals. The reflection of light on these crystals creates some spectacular atmospheric effects such as solar pillars, sun dogs and solar halos. These beautiful stamps demonstrate some of the amazing colours that can be observed in the Australian Antarctic Territory.

The medallion cover of this issue is not included with any standing order.

Australia has more than 8,000 islands with an area span of over 30,000 square kilometres.

Australian islands are the source of some of our most stunning and diverse terrain. The Islands of Australia stamp issue presents four Australian islands at ground level, to highlight their natural, yet distinct, beauty. Featured are Phillip Island in Victoria, Lady Musgrave Island in Queensland, Bruny Island in Tasmania and the Buccaneer Archipelago in Western Australia, itself a collection of around 1,000 islands off the Kimberley Coast. The stamps present the spectacular Horizontal Falls at Talbot Bay, in the Buccaneer Archipelago, which are the result of some of the highest tides in the world pushing through small cliff gaps. There's the coral-filled navigable lagoon surrounding Lady Musgrave Island. And we present the 360-degree views from Truganini's Lookout at the Neck, a sandy isthmus that separates North Bruny and South Bruny. We also feature a lovely view of the Pinnacles, from the rugged and rocky Cape Woolamai at Phillip Island.

Each of a human's 10 trillion cells contains 1.8 metres of DNA. Each molecule of DNA consists of two strands coiled around each other to form a double helix.

The Walter and Eliza Hall Institute of Medical Research is Australia's oldest medical research institute and is this year celebrating 100 years of discoveries for humanity.

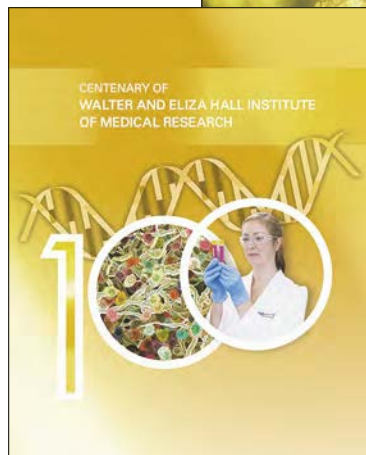

From its beginnings at the former Melbourne Hospital on Lonsdale Street, the institute has become an icon of Australian medical research. Scientific leaders including Nobel laureate Sir Macfarlane Burnet, Sir Gustav Nossal and Professor Donald Metcalf have contributed to its reputation as a place that embodies excellence in medical research.

The institute is a charity that focuses on understanding, preventing and treating cancers, immune disorders and infectious diseases. Institute researchers have made contributions that include developing snake antivenoms, pioneering the method for growing flu vaccines, and treating autoimmune diseases with drugs that suppress the body's immune system.

The institute's most significant achievement to date has been the discovery of blood hormones that boost infection-fighting white blood cell numbers after chemotherapy. This discovery has benefitted more than 20 million cancer patients.

The institute has also been integral to the establishment of institutions including the Commonwealth Serum Laboratories (now CSL Ltd) and the Australian Red Cross Blood Service. The Commonwealth Serum Laboratories were housed within the institute when they were established in 1916; and the institute expanded the Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service during World War II by establishing the blood storage and typing facilities that are the foundation of the services offered today.

800th Anniversary of Magna Carta

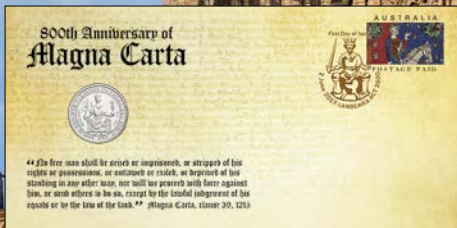

Released
2 June

Magna Carta (or Great Charter) is a charter of human rights. It is a foundation stone of constitutional and parliamentary democratic government in Britain and in countries that have adopted British law, including Australia.

The document was signed and sealed by King John of England at Runnymede, near Windsor, on 15 June 1215. Several versions were to follow, including the 1297 reissue by King Edward I. Only four copies of the 1297 version are in existence, including one purchased by the Australian government in 1952 which is now on display in Parliament House, Canberra.
