Dear Collectors

Welcome to the September edition of the Stamp Bulletin. In this edition we also provide details of a 25 August stamp release, The Birth of a Princess, not included in the previous edition as it was subject to royal approval. You will find the stamps and associated products presented on page 4.

A second issue with a royal theme introduced here honours the longest reigning monarch in British history. Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II surpasses the record of Queen Victoria on 9 September 2015. Also released in September is an issue that celebrates the successful environmental work of a dedicated team of dogs and their handlers on subantarctic Macquarie Island. Their work ensured the island could be declared pest-free, after years of introduced pests affecting the fragile environment.

Stamp Collecting Month 2015 takes us on a wonderful journey into our Solar System, with eight stamps. Part of this issue, a pair of 35c stamps is presented on a separate stamp sheet, and in an unusual combination in the stamp sheet panes. This should be of interest to many collectors.

Honoured by Australia, our first release in October, commemorates the lives of three great humanitarians. These international figures are recognised by Australia for their significant acts of courage, leadership and humanity. Also, in October, we remember the service of the countless animals that have served during times of conflict with A Century of Service: Animals in War. This stamp issue is the second in a five-year program of military-themed stamps released around Remembrance Day each year.

The stamp issue titled Bicycles looks at the evolution of this popular two-wheeled mode of transport, featuring bikes made in Australia – from the penny-farthing to a bespoke road bike.

Her Royal Highness Princess Charlotte of Cambridge was born at 8.34 BST on 2 May 2015. The second child of Their Royal Highnesses Catherine, Duchess of Cambridge and William, Duke of Cambridge, the baby princess was born in the Lindo Wing of St Mary's Hospital, London and weighed 8 pounds 3 ounces (3.71 kilograms).

Her birth was announced by a town crier outside the hospital, and later that day, according to tradition, two footmen placed the official declaration of the birth on an easel outside Buckingham Palace. The baby was shown to the public outside the hospital 10 hours after she was born. Two days later, she was named Charlotte Elizabeth Diana, in honour of both her great-grandmother Queen Elizabeth II and late grandmother, Diana, Princess of Wales.

Princess Charlotte is fourth in line to the British throne, after her brother, father and grandfather. This follows the Succession to the Crown Act 2013, which was brought into force 26 March 2015. The introduction of the Act replaced male primogeniture with absolute primogeniture, meaning that the little girl cannot be displaced by any succeeding brothers.

Princess Charlotte was christened on 5 July at the St Mary Magdalene Church, Sandringham, by Justin Welby, the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The project is reported to be the largest successful island pest-eradication program ever attempted.

Macquarie Island has significant biodiversity and is one of the few breeding locations for fauna in the Southern Ocean sector of the Pacific. Introduced non-native species have had a serious impact on its natural flora and fauna. In an effort to address this, Macquarie has been the focus of two intensive pest eradication programs in recent years: the first, to rid the island of cats, and, more recently, to rid it of rabbits, ship rats and mice.

Dogs have played a vital role in these campaigns. In December 2002, two dogs and several handlers ensured that all cats had been eradicated from the island, after scouring it for any last sign. Similarly, after an aerial baiting program in 2011, 12 rabbit detector dogs, including springer spaniels, labradors and one terrier-cross, covered more than 90,000 kilometres in their search for any sign of surviving rabbits.

The subantarctic Macquarie Island is a harsh environment for both humans and their canine companions. The dogs were highly trained to ensure they would not be distracted by native animals, such as penguins and seals. They were chosen for their tolerance to the cold, wet climate and for their superior work ethic. Three rodent detection dogs (terriers) and their two handlers joined the search in 2013, and in 2014, the eradication program was declared a success.

The World Heritage-listed Macquarie Island has thus entered a bright new era, free of the devastating impacts of pests for the first time in more than 100 years.

The stamps in this issue celebrate the Queen's reign through formal portraits taken by leading British society photographers.

On 9 September 2015, Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II becomes the longest-reigning British monarch in history. Her great-great grandmother, Queen Victoria, previously held this honour, reigning for 63 years and 216 days.

Princess Elizabeth acceded to the throne on 6 February 1952, following the death of her father. She was just 25 years of age. The coronation of the Queen took place more than a year later, on 2 June 1953, at which she was formally crowned Queen of the United Kingdom. Presided over by the Archbishop of Canterbury, the coronation ceremony remains in essence unchanged since the Norman Conquest of 1066: arriving at Westminster Abbey in the Gold State Coach, the new Queen then swore the coronation oath before being anointed, blessed and consecrated by the archbishop. Her coronation was celebrated in the streets of London by thousands upon thousands of both Britons and tourists.

Our Solar System

Our Solar System is our local neighbourhood in space. Compared to the distance to the nearest star, all the planets and smaller bodies that revolve around the Sun are close to us.

The Sun itself dominates our Solar System, making up 99.8% of its mass. Eight major planets circle the Sun, divided into two groups: the small rocky planets of the inner solar system, and the massive gas giants beyond the asteroid belt.

Mercury is the smallest planet in our Solar System (about 4,900 km in diameter), and is closest to the Sun. Its surface is affected by the Sun's intense heat. Mercury takes just 88 Earth days to orbit the Sun, but it rotates very slowly. It also has the largest temperature variation between day and night.

Venus is hidden under a blanket of clouds, and is a hellish world of crushing atmospheric pressure, high temperature and acid rain. Similar in size to the Earth, Venus is the hottest world in the Solar System, its thick carbon dioxide atmosphere trapping heat like a greenhouse, so that the surface temperature reaches 462°C.

Earth is the largest of the rocky planets (12,742 km in diameter), and has the greatest density of any planet in the Solar System. With its vast oceans and protective atmosphere, our home planet has proved just right for the development of life and is the only world in the universe where life is currently known to exist.

Mars has a diameter of 6,799 km, about half that of the Earth, with a surface temperature range of -87 to -5°C. A day on Mars is about 40 minutes longer than an Earth day, and it takes 687 days to orbit the Sun. Mars may once have been Earth-like, but has lost its surface water and possesses only a thin carbon dioxide atmosphere.

Jupiter is the largest planet in the Solar System, and is a ball of hydrogen and helium gas with possibly a small rocky or icy core. Jupiter is massive, with an equatorial diameter of 141,000 km. Its gaseous envelope has complex cloud bands that are roiled by massive storms. One of the most recognisable is the Great Red Spot, a huge anticyclonic storm 40,000 km across that has been raging for more than 400 years.

Saturn, famous for its complex ring system, is the sixth planet from the Sun and has an equatorial diameter of 120,536 km. It is made primarily of hydrogen, but its upper cloud layers include ammonia and water ices. Saturn rotates in 10 hours 39 minutes and takes about 29.45 years to orbit the Sun.

Uranus is the first planet to be discovered with the aid of a telescope (in 1781 by Sir William Herschel), and is an unusual world, tipped on its side by an ancient impact. Uranus rotates in a counter-clockwise direction like Venus and has a smoggy atmosphere of hydrogen, helium and methane over an icy interior.

Neptune, the outer most of the major planets, was discovered by telescope (in 1846, by Urbain Le Verrier and Johann Galle) as the result of mathematical calculations. It is smaller than Uranus (equatorial diameter 49,528km) and similar in composition. Pluto, also discovered mathematically in 1930 (by Clyde Tombaugh) was once considered a planet, but is now categorised as a dwarf planet. Pluto was explored in July 2015 by NASA spacecraft New Horizons.

An Honorary Order of Australia is awarded to non-Australian citizens, though the standard post-nominal and medal are used.

This stamp issue features three great international humanitarians, officially honoured by Australia for their significant acts of courage, leadership and humanity.

Mother Teresa (1910–1997) became an Honorary Companion of the Order of Australia (AC) in 1982, for her significant work to help the poor in Australia and internationally. She was presented with the award at a ceremony in India, the country where she founded her Missionaries of Charity. Today, volunteers from all over the world descend on the Missionaries of Charity centres in Australia, Asia, Africa, Latin America, North America and Europe to assist with the work that began over 60 years ago.

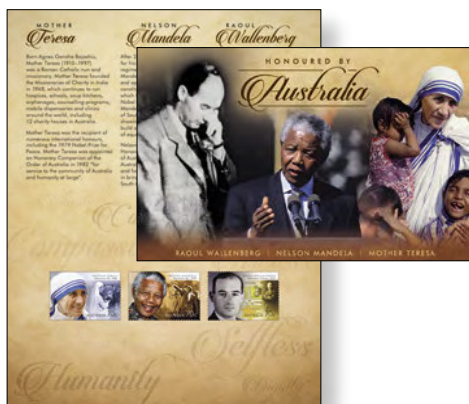

Nelson Mandela (1918–2013) was made an Honorary AC in 1999. At a presentation ceremony in South Africa, former prime minister John Howard said, "You are a person whose moral leadership... capacity for forgiveness and reconciliation have given the world an example that I don't think in our lifetime we will see again". Raoul Wallenberg (1912–?) became Australia's first Honorary Citizen in 2013. Present at the award ceremony at Government House, Canberra were many of those he saved from Nazi extermination, who made new lives in Australia. Then governor-general Quentin Bryce spoke of Wallenberg's refusal "to be indifferent in the face of inhumanity and hatred".

POSTCROSSING

What's it all about?

Postcrossing is the online platform that passionate postcard senders enjoy being part of. It's also a fun way to collect postcards and overseas stamps.

The Postcrossing project allows you to exchange a postcard with someone else – and it's free to be a member.

Launched in 2005 by Paulo Magalhães of Portugal, the project is an organised way for people to connect with others by sending and receiving postcards. Project members are called Postcrossers, and come from all countries and backgrounds. The diverse group includes grandparents, parents, teenagers, children, professionals and collectors, with the average member age being 26. There are more than half a million registered Postcrossers from 213 countries, including Australia.

Postcrossers are connected through a shared love of postal mail and the thrill of opening the letterbox to a new and interesting postcard or maxicard from someone unknown from any corner of the world. It's a lot of fun imagining where your next postcard will come from. The project is educational, a fun way to learn about the world and has obvious social benefits.

Thematic collectors can list their postcard preferences when joining up. Once you are a member, request an address from the website and mail a postcard to that address. Don't forget to add the ID number supplied; this allows your postcard to be registered as received at its destination and posted on the recipient member's online wall. Member profiles will let you know the type of postcard most desired and what they'd like to learn from you.

Once your postcard is sent, a random Postcrosser will be sent your address so that a postcard can be sent to you. And that's when the fun begins. To date, more than 30,537,000 postcards have been exchanged.

The annual Austral Wheel Race is reportedly the world's oldest track cycling handicap race.

At the end of the 1910s and on the back of the late-19th-century cycling craze, bicycles were the most popular form of individualised transport in Australia. But once the car became an affordable option, the popularity of the metal steed dipped. Today, cycling is again embraced, with around 55% of Australian households owning at least one bike in working order.

The history of bicycle design is particularly interesting, and partly for its rapid development. Once the technology moved beyond the much-maligned hobby horse, or Draisene – essentially propelled by the seated rider running – the major design transformations occurred over just a couple of decades from the early 1860s. Following the hobby horse the velocipede, or “boneshaker”, was developed in 1863; after the boneshaker the penny-farthing, aka high wheel or ordinary, arrived on the scene in the early 1870s; and from the penny-farthing the safety bike was came into being in 1885. The tricycle, quadricycle and “sociable” also appeared during this time of intense innovation, but it is the two-wheeler that has been enduring and proven itself most historically and socially important.

This stamp issue focuses on bike design from the late 19th century to 2015 through four examples, with each bike shown manufactured in Australia. They are a Bassett & Co. penny-farthing (1888), a Sutherland ladies' safety bike (c. 1910), a Finlay Bros sprung-frame men's safety bike (1930s) and a contemporary custom-made road bike (2015) by Baum Cycles.

Sarbi received several honours, including the RSPCA Purple Cross Award, the War Dog Operational Medal and the Canine Service Medal. The purple poppy commemorates the role played by animals in world conflicts.

This issue commemorates the countless animals that have assisted troops during times of war. Essential for transport, logistics, communications and companionship, they are often forgotten.

Mules and donkeys have been vital pack animals in most war situations. The best known are Simpson's donkeys, who carried first aid and wounded soldiers during the Gallipoli campaign in World War I.

Dogs have been used to carry messages and medical equipment. Their intelligence enables them to locate wounded men and to detect explosive devices. One of the most celebrated, Sarbi, vanished in Afghanistan in 2008, and was found 14 months later.

Thousands of horses sent from Australia died on the Western Front during World War I. They were used for troop and ammunition transport and hauling equipment. Of the more than 136,000 Walers (Australian-bred New South Walers) sent, only one, Sandy, was lucky enough to return home.

Pigeons were used by the Allies during both World Wars, although the Australian Corps of Signals Pigeon Service was not established until World War II. They were useful when communication was difficult with messages enclosed within tubes attached to the pigeon's leg.

Thousands of camels served in the Imperial Camel Corps in the Middle East during World War I. The Corps was founded in 1916 to deal with a revolt in Egypt's Western Desert. Of the first four battalions formed, the first and third were entirely Australian, and the fourth was a mix of Australians and New Zealanders. Camels were obviously well suited to a desert environment, and could walk at 4.8 km an hour, while carrying a soldier, his equipment and supplies.
