Love to Celebrate

Christmas Island Lunar New Year – Year of the Monkey

Decimal Currency Australia 1966–2016

Dear Collectors

Welcome to our first Bulletin of 2016. This would normally be sent to you in early December, but uncertainties about the new base rate of postage delayed its production. This edition brings you the first stamp issue with the new rate.

Michael Zsolt
Manager, Philatelic
Australia Post

All applications for the reproduction of Australian stamps should be made in writing to:

Manager Philatelic
Australia Post
GPO Box 1777
MELBOURNE VIC 3001
mailorder@auspost.com.au

I have written to each of you advising of changes to the price structure. If you have not received my letter, please contact the Mail Order Bureau so the relevant information can be forwarded to you.

The Wildflowers stamp issue was released in mid-December, ahead of the rate increase, effective 4 January 2016; issue details were unavailable for the November–December edition of the Bulletin. This colourful flora issue provided general mail users with stamps ahead of the rate rise date.

This year's Lunar New Year stamp issue celebrates the Year of the Monkey, the ninth sign in the 12-year cycle of animals in the Chinese zodiac. The base-rate stamp is offered through the Personalised Stamps™ service, which is a great option for those wishing to send personalised greetings or wanting a special collectable. The 10 new designs in the Love to Celebrate stamp issue, available on 25 January, can also be used in this manner.

A significant anniversary this year marks 50 years since the introduction of decimal currency in Australia, on 14 February 1966. The new currency fundamentally impacted everyday life, affecting individuals, businesses, community groups, government and everyone between. As the advertising jingle reminded Australians in the lead-up to the changeover, "In come the dollars, in come the cents to replace the pounds and shillings, and the pence..."

Finally, those who subscribe to the new newsletter through the Australia Post Collectables website will receive an exclusive imperforate minisheet as a thank you, as will collectors who have already subscribed. So if you haven't yet signed up, visit the website before 31 March 2016 to receive your gift.

Western Australia is the country's hot spot for wildflowers, home to around 10,000 species of the approximately 20,000 that occur across the country. This flourishing botanical scene is the result of a temperate climate and isolation from eastern Australia. Some 60 per cent of the species are endemic to Western Australia.

Rose Coneflower (Isopogon formosus) is a low, bushy or slender, upright shrub that grows between 20 centimetres and two metres high. Its compact, divided foliage has pointed tips, and its blooms, which begin as tight globular cones, open to around six centimetres in diameter. The stamp design shows the subspecies dasylepis.

Spiny Mirbelia (Mirbelia spinosa) is an erect or ascending spiny shrub that grows from 20 centimetres to 1.5 metres.

It has short, oblong-shaped leaves and its pea-like flowers cluster along its branches.

First described by Alexander von Bunge in 1854, Blue Devil (Eryngium pinnatifidum) is a perennial herb that grows from 20 to 50 centimetres high. The bold bloom is a little pineapple-like in shape, with spiked "petals" protruding from the flower head.

The delicate Golden Rainbow (Drosera microphylla) is a perennial tubular herb that grows to between 10 and 40 centimetres high. It prefers laterite and sandy soils and can often be found on rocky outcrops in the south-west of the state.

Terra Australis Postage Prepaid Envelopes

A new set of postage prepaid envelopes is being released to coincide with the increase to basic postage from 4 January 2016.

The set of five envelopes feature a colourful depiction of the Australian continent in the postage paid area.

The term Terra Australis is Latin for “Southern land”.

The idea that a great expanse of land was situated in the southern regions was first introduced by the ancient Greek philosopher Aristotle.

Reference to Terra Australis appeared on maps in the 15th century. Over time belief in the idea seemed to wane, although some maps of the 18th century still marked Terra Australis.

Discovery of lands that would later become Australia and New Zealand supported the notion that the great southern land mass earlier referred to by Aristotle was actually only within the polar region and not as extensive as first believed. However, in the early 19th century British explorer Mathew Flinders named Australia after Terra Australis.

Lunar New Year is one of the most important of the traditional Chinese festivals and is celebrated by Chinese people throughout the world. Seen as a time of renewal, it is also known as Spring Festival.

Celebrations vary regionally in China and centre on family. The celebrations include the burning of incense for ancestors, and friends visit each other with presents and exchange cards. Traditional lion and dragon dances are performed and fireworks are set off. Many families stay up to watch a special New Year broadcast on television.

The Monkey is the ninth sign in the Chinese Zodiac 12-year cycle. Those born under the sign are considered witty, mischievous and inquisitive. The Monkey's love of learning and ability to solve problems make it well suited to careers in finance, science and engineering. Famous people born in the Year of the Monkey include Hugh Jackman and Kylie Minogue.

Illustrating changes in our currency, the stamp design shows the pre-decimal £1 note, and the decimal $1 note and coin.

On 14 February 1966, decimal currency supplanted pounds, shillings and pence in Australia. The impact of this can hardly be overstated. Not only did it require individuals to rethink the method for everyday transactions (the three-unit system replaced by two units), but it also meant designing, producing and distributing new currency (and stamps); converting monetary machines; training banking and retail staff; and a huge public education campaign.

Designer Gordon Andrews (1914–2001) created the $1, $2, $10 and $20 notes released in 1966, as well as the $5 note, released in 1967, and the $50 note, released in 1973. His bright, bold and airy designs depict a diverse and inclusive Australia, representing Aboriginal culture, a woman other than the Queen for the first time (Caroline Chisholm on the $5 note), architecture and arts, science and industry, and Australian fauna.

Gold- and silversmith Stuart Devlin (1931–) designed the coins. Like Andrews, Devlin created superbly modern and beautifully composed designs, featuring native fauna and the Australian coat of arms. He also designed the $1 coin, which replaced the $1 note in 1984.
