Dear Collectors

Welcome to another edition of the Stamp Bulletin. Our first stamp issue in May recognises a historic tour that took place 150 years ago. In 1868, a team of 13 Aboriginal cricketers travelled to England to play against local and county teams, becoming the first team from Australia to tour internationally.

Types of cloud and their features are the subject of our Cloudscapes stamp issue, also being released in May. Every cloud belongs to one of 10 main groups, each telling an important story about the physical processes taking place in the atmosphere. These stamp designs present dramatic photographs of cloud formations presented over three Australian states.

We mark the 90th anniversary of the 1928 Trans-Pacific flight by Charles Kingsford-Smith and Charles Ulm with the release of a pre-paid envelope, and commemorate the 50th anniversary of the Battles of Coral and Balmoral (Vietnam) with a pre-paid envelope and a postal and numismatic cover.

A companion stamp issue to the previously released Finches of Australia will be released in June. It presents a further three species of these small and often-colourful birds. Included is the Gouldian Finch, often regarded as the most beautiful of Australia's finches.

If you've ever wondered how magnificent Australia can look from above, Art in Nature may provide the answer. The four stamps of this issue showcase the Australian landscape in all its glory, through artful examples of aerial photography.

The final stamp issue, released in June, presents the Cocos (Keeling) Islands art of basket weaving. This traditional craft provided receptacles for storing and transferring food and flowers, and is still performed today to create household storage and to cook and present food. Public basket weaving displays are conducted for visitors to Home Island.

This edition also presents a great new range of stamp packs and postcards.

The postmark is based on the artwork Walkabout Wickets by Fiona Clarke, a descendant of James “Mosquito” Couzens (Grougarrong), who played in the 1868 team.

In 1868, a team of 13 Aboriginal cricketers, most of whom were Jardwadjali, Gunditjmara and Wotjobaluk men from the Western District of Victoria, travelled to England. The Aboriginal XI played 47 matches against local and county English teams, between May and October 1868, including a match against the Gentlemen of Lord's, where Johnny Mullagh (Unaarrimin) top-scored. Impressively, the Australian team won 14, lost 14 and drew 19 of their matches.

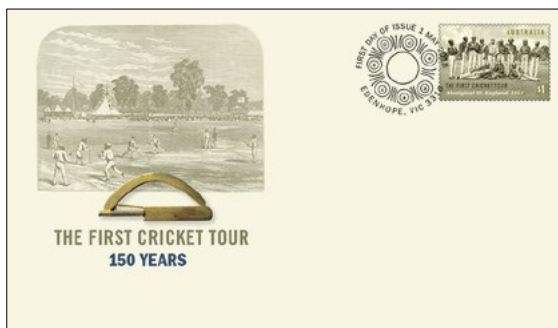

These ground-breaking players paved the way for the first Australian representative cricket tour of England, which occurred some ten years later in 1878, as well as the first Test match against England in 1880. The team was posthumously recognised in the Sport

Australia Hall of Fame, in 2002, as the first cricket team from Australia to tour England.

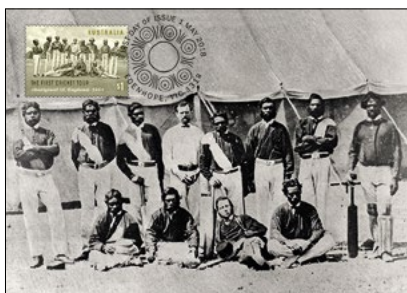

The stamp design incorporates one of the few remaining photographs of the 1868 tour, from the collection of the National Library of Australia. It includes the team's captain, English professional cricketer Charles Lawrence, but missing are King Cole (Bripumyarrimin), who passed away due to illness, as well as Sundown (Ballrinjarrimin) and Jim Crow (Lytejerbilijun), who returned home early. The photograph was taken at Swansea, in July 1868. The Aboriginal XI played a match against the Gentlemen of Swansea and won by an innings and 33 runs.

Every cloud belongs to the 10 main groups, called genera.

Clouds are made of tiny water droplets or ice crystals, suspended in the atmosphere. It is commonly observed that dark, threatening clouds can herald a storm, or that fluffy white clouds serenely billow across the sky on a perfect summer's day. But the science of cloud classification is much more complex than this.

Every cloud belongs to one of the 10 main groups, called genera. Most genera are further divided into species and varieties to account for differing characteristics. The basic nomenclature for clouds stems from the Latin term describing their physical form - cumulo (heap-like), strato (layer), cirro (hair-like), alto (high/upper) and nimbo (rain-bearing). Numerous combinations of species and varieties of the genera can be observed, with each telling an important story about the physical processes taking place in the atmosphere.

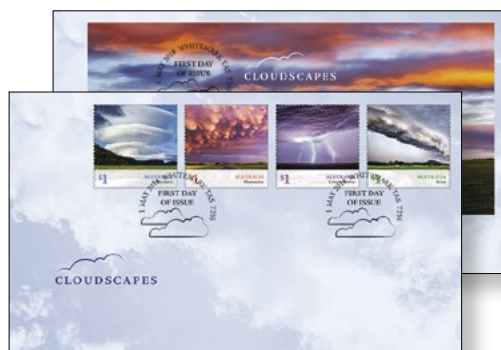

These stamps depict types of cloud or their features. The dramatic saucer-like clouds over Lachlan, Tasmania, known as Lenticularis clouds, are an example of the Alto cumulus genera, formed on the crests of atmospheric waves on the leeward side of hills or mountains. Mammatus describes the hanging protuberances, like udders, on the under surface of a cloud, often occurring with cumulonimbus, such those near Booborowie, South Australia. Cumulonimbus clouds are usually associated with atmospheric instability, like the lightning storm photographed between Auburn and Balaklava, South Australia. An arcus cloud is a low, horizontal formation appearing as a shelf or roll and usually associated with cumulonimbus clouds. The stamp shows storm clouds with a spectacular arcus feature near Boonah, Queensland.

Battles of Coral and Balmoral: 50 years

This pre-paid envelope commemorates the 50th anniversary of the Battles of Coral and Balmoral, which were particularly significant for Australia during the Vietnam War.

In May 1968, Fire Support Base Coral was established 20 kilometres north of Bien Hoa. Its purpose was to cover foot patrols and to intercept the route of the North Vietnamese and Viet Cong withdrawing from their assaults on Saigon. Within hours of the Australians establishing Coral on 12 May, the hastily prepared perimeter was attacked by the North Vietnamese, who overran several positions. In the desperate close-quarters fighting that ensued, the Australians were able to drive the North Vietnamese back with the assistance of mortar and artillery fire. The base was heavily attacked a second time on the night of 15-16 May, while less intense assaults occurred in the following weeks, and clashes also occurred during patrols into the surrounding territory.

Later in the month, the North Vietnamese turned their focus to Fire Support Base Balmoral, established by the Australians 4.5 kilometres to the north. As at Coral, the North Vietnamese attacked Balmoral shortly after its establishment, on 24-25 May. The weight of Australian firepower strengthened by the arrival of tanks enabled the Australians to repel the assault. A further incursion on 28 May was dealt with similarly, inflicting heavy losses on the attackers. By 6 June, the assaults had ceased in a battle that was costly for both sides.

Since 2015 some extraordinary artworks painted on grain silos have revitalised small rural communities across Australia. This stamp issue features just four of these monumental murals. Western Australia's Public Silo Art Trail includes Six Stages of Banksia Baxteri, painted on the silos at Amok Island in 2016. The first of the six silo projects now part of Victoria's Wimmera-Mallee Silo Art Trail was painted at Brim by Brisbane artist Guido van Helten. His mural depicting four local farmers was completed in early 2016. Queensland's first silo murals were painted in 2017 by Brisbane artists Drapl and The Zookeeper in the south-west town of Thallon. Local imagery in The Watering Hole includes the Moonie River. The first art silos in New South Wales were also painted in 2017, in the central west town of Weethalle. Melbourne artist Heesco Khosnaran's mural of a shearer and wheat farmer is a celebration of the town's agricultural history. The minisheet depicts the silos at Patchewollock, on Victoria's Silo Art Trail. Painted in 2016 by Brisbane artist Fintan Magee, the 35-metre mural shows local farmer Nick Hulland.

The artwork on silos featured in this stamp issue reflects the rural environment.

These small colourful birds are popular with birdwatchers.

In March 2018, we released a stamp issue featuring four Australian finch species: the Blue-faced Parrot-Finch, Double-barred Finch, Star Finch and Zebra Finch. Another three of Australia's 19 finch species take flight in June, with this companion issue to Finches of Australia.

The Gouldian Finch (Erythrura gouldiae) is often regarded the most beautiful of Australia's finches. Its varied and brightly coloured plumage makes it popular as a caged bird, and this, as well as the effects of grazing on its habitat, has led to its decline in the wild. Until recently it had been listed as "endangered". The Gouldian Finch may be seen in flocks or small parties, and is distributed across tropical northern Australia, from Cape York in the east to the Kimberley in the west.

The Beautiful Firetail (Stagonopleura bella) is just that, with its stunning finely-barred plumage offset by a bright scarlet tail and scarlet beak. This species is restricted to the southern-most coastal areas of Australia, occurring through southern New South Wales and Victoria into south-east South Australia and throughout Tasmania. It is the only grass-finch to occur on the island state.

First described by John Gould in 1837, the gregarious Black-throated Finch (Poephila cincta) commonly occurs in flocks of up to around 30 birds. Its two subspecies (cincta and atropygialis) occur down Australia's eastern seaboard, from the tip of Cape York formerly into northern New South Wales; southern populations, south from the Tropic of Capricorn, have declined dramatically.

Seen from above, land formations and coastal areas take on the appearance of natural artistic landscapes.

The landscape can be remarkable for its capacity to mimic art, though arguably it is more a case of our capacity to recognise visual rhythms and patterns and then label them “art”. Aerial photography is a mode of visualisation that enables the remarkable beauty of the landscape to unfold as art. It reveals, in unexpected ways, not only extraordinary singular landforms (seeing Uluru from above, for example, is a totally different experience to viewing it at ground level), but it also accentuates patterns and symmetry that invoke deeply felt connections with planet Earth.

The double-definitive size stamps in this issue, featuring photographs taken by Richard Woldendorp and Christian Fletcher, illustrate just why the beauty of the Australian landscape is so mythologised. These four windows onto the land show abstracted pictorial spaces that are recognisably “landscapes” but that highlight a wonderful painterly quality. They feature sites from across the continent – from Western Australia, Queensland and South Australia – each distinct in its colour, form and type (estuary, salt lake, beach and tidal sands).

In January 2016, the United Nations' Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) came into effect. The SDGs provide a blueprint to put the world on a sustainable path to 2030 and address pressing economic, social and environmental challenges.

These 17 Global Goals – covering priorities as diverse as poverty alleviation, gender equality, climate action and decent work – present a global strategy for individual and collective action to achieve sustainable development.

Governments, businesses and people everywhere have an important role in achieving these goals, and Australia Post is excited to play a domestic leadership role in championing them. In 2016, we were one of the first Australian companies to embrace the SDGs.

The SDGs cut across all areas of our operations and value chain. Addressing these goals is critical to seeing our customers, communities and our own business prosper and become more inclusive.

These stamps have been produced by Australia Post Sprintpak. We utilise the world's best technical capability to supply our clients with gummed and self-adhesive stamps in a range of sizes and formats.

We produce a range of stamp, numismatic and stamp collectables and souvenir packed products. In addition we have also produced products for postal administrations in New Zealand, Singapore, Hong Kong, Macau, Ireland, Switzerland, South Africa, Portugal and Belgium.

On Home Island, in the Cocos (Keeling) Islands, the local Cocos Malay population still engage in traditional basket weaving, known as keroso. Round, rectangular, boat-shaped and cylindrical baskets are created using palm leaves. The baskets were traditionally used for storage and transportation of flowers, fruit and bait, and for drying fish and coconut shells. Today, they are often used around the home as a form of storage for household items.

In addition to baskets, serving mats are woven for the presentation of food, and small woven parcels known as ketupat are used for cooking glutinous rice. The ketupat are made using the young inner fronds of the palm leaves. A delicious rice dish, found at most Cocos Malay feasts, is made by pushing a mixture of mung beans and glutinous rice into the woven parcels and cooking them in coconut milk.
